Yuma's colorful history began in 1540 when Hernando de Alarcon, a Spanish Explorer, became the first European to see the present town site. It became a territorial possession of the United States in 1854, after being under the flags of Spain and Mexico from 1540 to 1854. An agreement set forth by the Gadsden Purchase granted the United States the new territory. In the 1850's, Yuma became the major river crossing for the California gold seekers, becoming known as the gateway to the Southwest. Yuma was identified by several names in its early years. From 1854 to 1858 - Colorado City, from 1858 - 1873 - Arizona City, and in 1873 a decision of the Territorial Legislature gave Yuma its present name.

The name of the chief inhabitants of the county and city, the Yumas. They were a combination of Indian tribes of the lower Colorado Region which consisted of the Quechans, Cocopahs and the Mohaves. They were bound together by being of one linguistic group. Yuma's unforgettable and forever lasting history came from the people who lived here. The mountain men, Fort Yuma soldiers, rivermen, railroaders, and the inmates of the infamous Territorial Prison were all part of the history that makes Yuma part of the Old American West.

The staff at The Crossing would like to welcome you to Yuma; Gateway to the Great Southwest!
